28TH STREET FEATURE

I hate this job

Dude! Wha' sup? Hey, you're not actually reading this column are you? I thought no one ever read stuff from the editor, for good reason too. I find that editors rarely have anything important to say in these stupid vanity sections. Who am I to write something about something on a topic not worth writing about in the first place. (This column is a good example of A: Editor has absolutely no idea on what to write about. B: Worthless tripe not uncommon in most college magazines. C: An excellent example of combining A and B into an article that pretty much condemns itself.) Anyway, having suckered you into reading this far, I will present you with a paragraph worthy of a Pulitzer Prize.

Throughout the centuries, Mankind has always found himself the center of attention in the great apex of humanity. This being said, I can still say without a doubt that I am still wasting a large majority of your time. Could be worse, could have paid good money for a publication of this nature, however, you did not.

I hope you enjoy the following pages.

Almost Sincere,

Weldon Wall
